Qualifications

Please describe your relevant analytical skills.

Apart from the analytical skills necessary for everyday living, I have held several freelance jobs involving analytical skills, including being a reader/team leader for NCS Pearson - analyzing and scoring student writing, and as Product Analyst for Holt, Rinehart, and Winston, analyzing the curricula of various states and aligning them to the appropriate sections in Harcourt's textbooks as a reference for students and teachers. Finally, I worked as a census enumerator in 2010, a job which involved analysis of maps, routes etc. in order to efficiently perform the job.

Please describe your ability to be impartial.

I believe most of us struggle with prejudices that were unwittingly and subtly implanted in us as we were growing up. These prejudices are not necessarily due to a feeling of superiority or inferiority, but just a prejudice in favor of the familiar versus the unfamiliar. Until, we come to realize that people are not that different after all except on the surface.

All I can say is that I have an innate sense of fairness, and like to think that I can put my prejudices aside when making decisions of import. Over the years, having made so many good friends from so many countries, races & cultures, any 'unfamiliarity prejudices' I may have had, have slowly eroded because there is not that much that is unfamiliar anymore.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

As a person who was born in India, but has lived and travelled in many parts of the world from a very early age, I have learned to appreciate & enjoy a gamut of cultures. To celebrate Austin's cultural heterogeneity, I, along with two close friends, organized a hugely popular 'world cultures fair' at our kids elementary school 20 years ago. It is amazing to think that even then Austin was so diverse in the ethnicity of its residents and this diversity has increased manyfold over the years, enriching and enhancing the city. It's diversity is one of the major attractions of our charming city and I, for one, would not change that for the world.

The geographical diversity of Austin is the reason so many of us come to Austin, and never want to move. From the beautiful lakes, to the gorgeous hill country, to the outlying ranches and even the underground caves, Austin geographical landscape is a constant source of delight to those who live here. As an Austinite who has lived here for over 30 years, I am always delighted to show any visiting guests the splendid vistas in Austin,

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.
